To Whom It May Concern

This letter serves as an introduction for Messer's Denis McDade, Sandy Jamieson and Ramsay McMaster, all of whom work extensively in the field of elite player development.

Denis is a PGA member of 12 years and has held elite coaching positions with the Australian Institute of Sport, Women's Golf Victoria and the Victorian Institute of Sport where he currently holds the position of Head Coach. Denis was awarded Victorian Divisional Teacher of the Year in 2001 and is a finalist for the National Award to be presented later this month.

Sandy is a full PGA Member and is Assistant Coach with the Victorian Institute of Sport. He was involved in producing a Children's Golf Colouring Book that has been endorsed by the US PGA.

Ramsay is a physiotherapist who has undertaken extensive research and development on cause effect relationships between physiological development and swing mechanics. Ramsay has worked extensively as a specialist service provider for the Australian institute of Sport, Victorian Institute of Sport and the Australian PGA.

Both gentlemen have presented seminars and workshops to PGA members as part of the Australian PGA Professional Development Programme, where they have been extremely well received. They are both scheduled to present at this years PGA Coaching Summit in early May.

I would have no hesitation in recommending them to you as presenters within own Professional Development Programme workshops, and/or approving their workshop sessions for Continuing Education Points.

Please feel free to contact me should you have any further questions regarding either of the gentlemen or their area of expertise.

Yours sincerely,

Phil Ayres
